	6+1 Assessment Rubric
	Ideas	Organization	Voice
5	This paper is clear and focused. It holds the reader's attention. Relevant anecdotes and details enrich the central theme. • The topic is narrow and manageable.	The Organization enhances and showcases the central idea or theme. The order, structure, or presentation of information is compelling and moves the reader through the text.	The writer speaks directly to the reader in a way that is individual, compelling, and engaging. The writer crafts the piece with an awareness of and respect for the audience and the
	 Relevant, quality details give the reader important information that goes beyond the obvious or predictable. Reasonably accurate details are present to support the main ideas. The writer seems to be writing from knowledge or experience; the ideas are fresh and original. The reader's questions are anticipated and answered. Insight - an understanding of life and a knack for picking out what is significant - is an indicator of high-level performance, though not required. 	 An inviting introduction draws the reader in. A satisfying conclusion leaves the reader with a sense of closure and resolution. Thoughtful transitions clearly show how ideas connect. Details seem to fit where they're placed; sequencing is logical and effective. Pacing is well controlled; the writer knows when to slow down and elaborate, and when to pick up the pace and move on. The title (if requested), is original and captures the central theme of the piece. Organization flows so smoothly the reader hardly thinks about it; the choice of structure matches the purpose and audience. 	 writing's purpose. The tone of the writing adds interest to the message and is appropriate for the purpose and audience. The reader feels a strong interaction with the writer, sensing the person behind the words. The writer takes a risk by revealing who he or she is consistently throughout the piece. Expository or persuasive writing reflects a strong commitment to the topic by showing why the reader needs to know this and why he or she should care. Narrative writing is honest, personal, and engaging and makes the reader think about and react to the author's ideas and point of view.
3	The writer is beginning to define the topic, even though development is still basic or general. The topic is fairly broad; however, you can see where the writer is headed. Support is attempted, but doesn't go far enough in fleshing out the key issues or story line. Ideas are reasonably clear, though they may not be detailed, personalized, accurate, or expanded enough to show in-depth understanding or a strong sense of purpose. The writer seems to be drawing on knowledge or experience, but has difficulty going from general observations to specifics. The reader is left with questions. More information is needed to "fill in the blanks". The writer generally stays on the topic but does not develop a clear theme. The writer has not yet focused the topic beyond the obvious.	The organizational structure is strong enough to move the reader through the text without too much confusion. The paper has a recognizable introduction and conclusion. The introduction may not create a strong sense of anticipation; the conclusion may not tie up all loose ends. Transitions usually work well; at other times, connections between ideas are fuzzy. Sequencing shows some logic, but is not under enough control to consistently support the ideas. Sometimes, in fact, it is so predictable and rehearsed that the structure distracts from the content. Pacing is fairly well controlled, though the writer sometimes lunges ahead too quickly or spends too much time on details that do not matter. A title (if requested) is present, although it may be uninspired or a restatement of the prompt or topic. The organization sometimes supports the main point or story line; at other times, the reader feels an urge to slip in a transition or move things around.	The writer seems sincere but not fully engaged or involved. The result is pleasant, or even personable, but not compelling. The writer seems aware of an audience but discards personal insights in favor of obvious generalities. The writing communicates in an earnest, pleasing, yet safe manner. Only one or two moments here and there intrigue, delight, or move the reader. These places may emerge strongly for a line or two, but quickly fade away. Expository or persuasive writing lacks consistent engagement with the topic to build credibility. Narrative writing is reasonably sincere, but doesn't reflect unique or individual perspective on the topic.
1	As yet, the paper has no clear sense of purpose or central theme. To extract meaning, the reader must make inferences based on sketchy or missing details. • The writer is still in search of a topic or has not yet decided what the main idea of the piece will be. • Information is limited or unclear, or the length is not adequate for development. • The idea is a simple restatement of the assigned topic or an answer to the question with little or no attention to detail. • The writer has not begun to define the topic in a meaningful, personal way. • Everything seems as important as everything else; the reader has a hard time sifting out what is important. • The text may be repetitious, or may read like a collection of disconnected, random thoughts with no discernable point.	Writing lacks a clear sense of direction. Ideas, details, or events seem strung together in a loose or random fashion; there is no identifiable internal structure. • There is no real lead to set up what follows, no real conclusion to wrap things up. • Connections between ideas are confusing or not even present. • Sequencing needs lots and lots of work. • Pacing feels awkward; the writer slows to a crawl when the reader wants to get on with it, and vice versa. • No title (if requested) is present or, if present, does not match well with the content. • Problems with organization make it hard for the reader to get a grip on the main point or story line.	The writer seems indifferent, uninvolved, or distanced from the topic and/or the audience. The writer is not concerned with the audience. The writer's style is a complete mismatch for the intended reader, or the writing is so brief that little is accomplished beyond introducing the topic. The writer speaks in a kind of monotone that flattens all potential highs or lows in the message. The writing is humdrum and "risk-free." The writing is lifeless or mechanical; depending on the topic, it may be overly technical or filled with jargon. The development of the topic is so limited that no point of view is present – zip, zero, zilch, nada.

6+1 Assessment Rubric
	Word Choice	Sentence Fluency	Conventions
5	Words convey the intended message in a precise, interesting, and natural way. The words are powerful and engaging. • Words are specific and accurate. It is easy to understand just what the writer means. • Striking words and phrases often catch the reader's eye and linger in the reader's mind.	The writing has an easy flow, rhythm, and cadence. Sentences are well built, with strong and varied structure that invites expressive oral reading. Sentences are constructed in a way that underscores and enhances the meaning. Sentences vary in length as well as structure. Fragments, if used, add style. Dialogue, if present, sounds natural.	The writer demonstrates a good grasp of standard writing conventions (e.g., spelling, punctuation, capitalization, grammar and usage, paragraphing) and uses conventions effectively to enhance readability. Errors tend to be so few that just minor touch-ups would get this piece ready to publish. Spelling is generally correct, even on more difficult words.
	 Language and phrasing is natural, effective, and appropriate for the audience. 	 Purposeful and varied sentence beginnings add originality and energy. 	 The punctuation is accurate, even creative, and guides the reader through the text.
m	 Lively verbs add energy while specific nouns and modifiers add depth. Choices in language enhance the meaning and clarify 	 The use of creative and appropriate connectives between sentences and thoughts shows how each relates to, and 	 A thorough understanding and consistent application of capitalization skills are present.
	 Precision is obvious. The writer has taken care to put just the right word or phrase in just the right spot. 	 builds upon, the one before it. The writer has thought about the sound of the words as well as the meaning. The first time you read it aloud is a breeze. 	 Grammar and usage are correct and contribute to clarity and style. Paragraphing tends to be sound and reinforces the organizational structure. The writer may manipulate conventions for stylistic effect – and it works! The piece is very close to being ready to publish.
3	The language is functional, even if it lacks much energy. It is easy to figure out the writer's meaning on a general level. • Words are adequate and correct in a general sense, and	The text hums along with a steady beat, but tends to be more pleasant or businesslike than musical, more mechanical than fluid.	The writer shows reasonable control over a limited range of standard writing conventions. Conventions are sometimes handled well and enhance readability; at other times, errors are distracting and impair readability.
	 they support the meaning by not getting in the way. Familiar words and phrases communicate but rarely capture the reader's imagination. Attempts at colorful language show a willingness to stretch and grow, but sometimes reach beyond the audience (thesaurus overload!). 	 Although sentences may not seem artfully crafted or musical, they get the job done in a routine fashion. Sentences are usually constructed correctly. They hang together; they are sound. Sentence beginnings are not ALL alike; some variety is attempted. 	Spelling is usually correct or reasonable phonetic on common words, but more difficult words are problematic. End punctuation is usually correct; internal punctuation is sometimes missing or wrong. Most words are capitalized correctly; control over more
	 Despite a few successes, the writing is marked by passive verbs, everyday nouns, and mundane modifiers. The words and phrases are functional with only one or two fine moments. The words may be refined in a couple of places, but the language looks more like the first thing that popped into 	 The reader sometimes has to hunt for clues that show how sentences interrelate through connecting words and phrases. Parts of the text invite expressive oral reading; others may be stiff, awkward, choppy, or gangly. 	 sophisticated capitalization skills may be spotty. Problems with grammar or usage are not serious enough to distort meaning but may not be correct or accurately applied all of the time. Paragraphing is attempted but may run together or begin in the wrong places.
1	the writer's mind. The writer demonstrates a limited vocabulary or has not searched for words to convey specific meaning.	The reader has to practice quite a bit in order to give this paper a fair interpretive reading.	 Moderate editing (a little of this, a little of that) would be required to polish the text for publication. Errors in spelling, punctuation, capitalization, grammar and usage, and/or paragraphing repeatedly district the reader and
	Words are so nonspecific and distracting that only a very limited meaning comes through. Problems with language leave the reader wondering. Many of the words just don't work in this piece.	 Sentences are choppy, incomplete, rambling or awkward; they need work. Phrasing does not sound natural. The patterns may create a sing-song rhythm, or a chop-chop cadence that lulls the reader to sleep. 	make the text difficult to read. Spelling errors are frequent, even on common words. Punctuation (including terminal punctuation) is often missing or incorrect.
	 Audience has not been considered. Language is used incorrectly, making the message secondary to the misfires with the words. Limited vocabulary and/or misused parts of speech 	 There is little to no "sentence sense" present. Even if this piece were flawlessly edited, the sentences would not hang together. Many sentences begin the same way and may follow the 	 Capitalization is random, and only the easiest instances show awareness of correct use. Errors in grammar or usage are quite noticeable, frequent, and affect meaning.
	seriously impair understanding. Words and phrases are so unimaginative and lifeless that they detract from the meaning. Jargon or clichés distract or mislead. Redundancy may	 same patterns (e.g., subject-verb-object) in a monotonous pattern. Endless connectives (and, and so, but then, because, and then, etc.) or a complete lack of connectives create a massive jumble of language. 	 Paragraphing is missing, irregular, or so frequent (every sentence) that it has no relationship to the organizational structure of the text. The reader must read once to decode, then again for massive jumble of language.

• The text does not invite expressive oral reading.

• The reader must read once to decode, then again for meaning. Extensive editing (virtually every line) would be required to polish the text for publication.

distract the reader.